It is intimated in the Herald that the Norwich police must have been pretty short of money to arrest the doctor, who tells his story of his arrest for speeding and of how he was fined $25 and costs which amounted in all to $34.50.

One thing that is omitted in the doctor's story is that the doctor was also found to be traveling without his license and that that was included in the court charges against him.

According to the Norwich police, the doctor was followed down Broad whose speedometer showed that he was making 35 miles an hour.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. John H. Wallace.

Following an illness that had been regarded as serious only during the past few days, Mrs. John H. Wallace, widow of the late John H. Wallace, passed away at the home of her son, William, Blackburn of

No. 16 Cliff street on Thursday evening at quarter before seven o'clock.

Her death was not wholly unexpected, but it brings a sudden sense of sorrow to a wide circle of friends in this city and particularly in Greenville, where she lived for nearly sixty years. Only during the past three months had she made her home with her brother.

Mrs. Wallace was the daughter of James and Margaret Blackburn and was a native of Glasgow, Scotland.

She would have been 77 years of age next October. In Scotland she married John H. Wallace and they came to America and to Greenville in the fifties. Mr. Wallace was connected with the business of the late John H. Wallace, who was a prominent citizen of Greenville and they were numbered among

EXPLOSION IN DRUG STORE CELLAR

Lively Blaze in Smith's R Store on Main Street—Started in Cellar Where Boy Had Been Filling Bottle With Compound Containing Gasoline—Fire, Water and Smoke Damage Over $1,000—Department Got at Seat of the Fire in Short Order.

An explosion in the front end of the cellar of Smith's R store at No. 303 Main street on Thursday afternoon at 2:45 o'clock started a fire that gave the department a lively fight for about half an hour, but was under control by that time, and the recall was struck in by Chief Howard L. Stanton at 3:47.

The prompt work of the firemen, with the effective way in which they got streams of water at the right spot to smother out the blaze, kept the flames practically all in the section of the store where the fire started, but there was some water damage as well as smoke damage on the main floor of the drug store, while the smoke also penetrated up through the three stories of the building and spread into adjoining buildings.

The explosion was at once followed by a burst of flame and dense black smoke that shot up into the drug store and gave alarm in the street when it poured out of the window which was open to Main street.

The explosion took place in a section of the cellar where the boy, who had been employed filling bottles of Kill-Bug, was in the rear end of the cellar when the explosion occurred, so that he escaped injury, but had to rush out in a hurry as the flames seemed bound to spread through the whole cellar.

There is gasoline in the Kill-Bug compound and it was believed by Manager Frank R. Eggleston who was in charge of the store at the time that the explosion was caused by a short circuit, might have been communicated to the atmosphere impregnated with gasoline, causing the explosion.

Policeman Frank E. Henderson caught sight of the spouting of flame and smoke from the cellar at almost the instant it took place and at once rang alarm from box 4, at the corner of Main street and Broadway. At the same time Policeman Charles Smith made a dash for box 23, on Franklin square, near Ferry street, and the second alarm was sounded. The crowd that collected quickly by the store by the policeman to open the door for the arriving firemen to operate on the explosion.

The first line of hose was led down to the front of the store and a stream of water from it was shot into the cellar through the cellar window, from which the smoke and flames were coming.

Another line of hose was led from the hydrant at the corner of Shetucket and Main streets and the stream of water from this was also used at the front of the Smith store, where the window was smashed in and as soon as possible after the smoke cleared off, the firemen penetrated into the store.
